CHAPTER 3

The School FOR MORAL AMBITION

Explore examples

3.1 Prepare for the third session

In this chapter, you'll continue to apply the ITN framework and the concept of VORP as tools to measure impact. This time, however, you'll use them to help identify inspiring examples of moral ambition. The idea is to make your aspirations more concrete for yourself and reflect on what you can learn from others who've gone before you.

How can you best prepare for the session?

- Prepare a short pitch about the person you approached in module 2.4. You'll have about 4-5 minutes during the session to share your pitch and place the person on a moral ambition graph (more on this in the live session module below). Use the following questions to structure your pitch:
    - Why do you consider them morally ambitious?
    - How would you evaluate their actions using the ITN framework?
    - How would you evaluate their VORP?
    - What do you find inspiring about them and what does it say about the steps you might want to take moving forward?

  Print out a picture of them with a brief description and bring it with you to the next session. You're going to need it for the plotting exercise.
- Check out our international challenges reading list. This list compiles the key insights we've gathered so far on the areas where we believe a career can truly make a difference. The idea is that you explore which issues you feel drawn to and deepen your knowledge by diving into some of the recommended sources.

As a session host, you'll have a few extra responsibilities:

- In general, follow these tips for preparing and hosting the session
- Review the slides before the session to find out how to prepare

3.2 Live session

In this session, you will discuss examples of moral ambition with your group. The goal is to broaden your understanding of moral ambition by applying the concepts of ITN and VORP to a variety of individuals you consider morally ambitious.

For a more detailed view of the session, check out the presentation slides.

Tip: we have prepared a few examples (both real and fictional) that you can use for your plotting session. You can choose to print them out beforehand and cut them out to make cards.

Part 1	- Opening ritual - Individual pitches and plotting of morally ambitious people
Part 2	- Individual pitching and plotting of role models (cont.) - Reflection on the exercise - Closing ritual
Resources	Schedule of the session	Slides for the session

3.3 Reach out

It's time for the networking exercise of the chapter!

- Think of a person you find inspiring. This time, they should be working in a sector or on a problem you're particularly interested in. Reach out to them for a conversation!
  Here are some tips:
  - Tell them why you've reached out to them.
  - Ask them about their job and overall career journey. What did it take them to get where they are now? Who are their own role models?
  - Ask them about the skills and knowledge they need to perform well in their job.
  - Explore your options with them. What do they recommend you to do next?

3.4 Walk & talk

It's time to reach out to your accountability buddy again!

You could discuss what resonated with you from the chapter and how you're getting along with your networking challenge.